ARMIN DIEL – PROFILE

Armin Diel is one of Germany's most acclaimed Riesling producers. His family has owned the celebrated estate of Schlossgut Diel, in Burg Layen, in the Nahe River Valley since 1802. Involved in the estate from the early years of his childhood, Armin assumed management of the winery, a 12th century medieval castle and its prestigious vineyards, the best known being Goldloch (pebbles), and Pittermännchen (slate), in 1987. Ten years later, Armin acquired Burgberg (quartz), another outstanding vineyard on the eastern side of Goldloch. All three parcels have been classified on an official ground tax map with the highest possible ranking since 1901, giving them status comparable to a Burgundy Grand Cru.

Schlossgut Diel is internationally renowned for its white wines, predominately Rieslings, across a wide range of styles. The intense Goldloch wines are similar to the great Rheingau-Rieslings; the Pittermännchen Rieslings are more like the refined Middle Mosels; and the Burgberg is a brilliant source for great dry Rieslings. Schlossgut Diel is also highly regarded for its rare sweet Eisweins and Ausleses. The estate is a member of the prestigious "Verband Deutscher Prädikatsweingüter" (VDP) and Armin is president of the VDP-Nahe section.

Armin is also one of Germany's leading wine writers (though he never comments on his own wines). He is co-editor of the German Gault Millau Wine Guide and writes frequently about French and German wines for Alles über Wein, Germany's leading wine review.

Armin and his wife Monika live in Burg Layen. He and his wife have a grown son, Victor, and a daughter, Caroline, who just completed her studies in enology in Geisenheim – Germany's UC Davis equivalent.
